

ESC 150
Grading Comments

There are 100 points associated with this lab (that will be averaged into the final grade).

The individual paper is worth 50 points. This grade will be based on the grading rubric and each student will get the number of points they earn from this assignment.

The group process (how well students work in their groups, interact with each other, share the group work, etc.) will be worth a maximum of 20 points and will also determine the number of points that each student will get as a part of the group presentation.

The group presentation is worth a maximum of 30 points. After the group gives their presentation, the instructor will assign the number of points earned for the presentation overall. A multiplier based on the group process score will determine individual scores for the presentation. For example, if the group got 28 points on their presentation and an individual student interacted as a vital part of the group, that student would receive the full 28 points for his/her individual presentation score. If, however, another student in that group did not actively participate in the group process and only got 10 of the 20 points from the group process, then he/she might receive a percentage of the full number of points for the presentation (for example 14 points).
